Course Description

Programming languages, algorithms, software engineering, networking, graphics, artificial intelligence, and multimedia signal processing.

Grading

Homework Assignments	20%	No late HW accepted.
Participation	10%
Midterm Exam	35%	No make up. (11/5/2019)
Final Exam	35%	No make up. (1/7/2020)

Attendance Policy

Students are expected to attend every lecture and every lab whenever they are healthy.

Midterm Exams

Students will be allowed to make up for exam they miss due to illness. Students must present a note from the clinic or hospital, dated either previous to or the day of the exam being offered. The note must state that the student was ill at the time of the exam being offered. The makeup exam must be scheduled with Prof. Hua by email, and will be 7-10 days after the original date of the exam missed. In general, an oral make-up exam will be given, which is generally harder than the written exam due to the nature of the oral exam.

Final Exam

The final exam will be a comprehensive exam.

Regrade Policy

To request a regrade on any homework, quiz, or exam, do not make any alterations to your returned exam. On a separate sheet define precisely your specific request regarding the particular part of the particular problem. Sign and date the request for the regrade underneath the statement, "I have made no additions or alterations to my homework/quiz/exam after it was returned to me." Return the homework/quiz/exam and the statement requesting the regrade to the instructor within 7 days of receiving the graded homework/quiz/exam.

Homework

No late homework will be accepted. It is ok to discuss your approach to solving the problems with friends, but the write-up of the solution you hand in must be your own. Be careful not to plagiarize! Plagiarism will be severely punished and will be filed.

Academic Dishonesty and Policies on Cheating

- In order to prevent cheating, we ask that you keep your eyes on your sheet at all times during tests. Looking around is forbidden. Electronic devices (e.g., calculators, cell phones, PDAs, iPods) are strictly forbidden during quizzes and exams unless further notice.

- Working on an exam/quiz either before or after the official time is considered cheating. The exams/quiz of any student who is caught writing after time is up or before the exam begins will receive a grade of zero, and this will be reported to the chairman of CSIE department, as well as the school.

- We keep an electronic copy of all graded exams in order to compare them with any exam brought in for a grade revision. Any student who alters his/her exam post grading and asks for a grade revision will be caught and will suffer severe disciplinary actions. (Expulsion from the University is possible.)
